Occupy Los Angeles News

[LOS ANGELES] Occupy LA welcomes traveling occupiers weekly. So this week OLA News talked with two of them. They are Sebastian from France and John from Oakland.

Sebastian (below) started occupying in British Columbia Canada. His first stay was at Whitehorse a small town located in the southern Yukon. Sebastian and others were protesting the "high rents and heating costs. It get's minus 7 or more there," he said. He then went on to occupy "another small village called Keremeos B.C.. Lots of forest fires there," he emphasized.

Now Sebastian was at Occupy LA. We spoke with him on his first night and on his last day. Both times he showed high pride in being a part of OWS.

Then there was John (right) from Oakland at OLA for the past two days. He initially went to Bakersfield and found "not much there." But when speaking of his current stop at OLA he smiled and said, "this is nice. City Hall, great ideal More peaceful down here."

John was excited to have a small "99%" sign in front of his pillow and sleeping bag. He chose as his home a space on the steep sloping lawn of the southeast corner of the encampment. The skies were threatening heavy rains. John had no tent but still happy to be at Occupy LA.

How will he protect himself from the upcoming precipitation? He said, "these guys over here were nice last night, I think they will help me out."

Right shoulder to the wall
Keep it moving down the hall
Show no fear at all
Cuz they're looking for a brawl
And you're not in a shopping mall
So keep your wits and wherewithal
Take their unmitigated gall
Just swallow and stand tall
While they trip you till you fall
Cuz you're answering a higher call
To remain steadfast in the truth
And live to build a future for the youth
So try NOT to be uncouth
While you move on down that hall
With your shoulder to the wall.
